Exquisite Corpse

30-60 min facilitated exercise- $300 for up to 50 and $450 for 51-100 participants

To explore the mystery of accident, Parisian Surrealists employed a collective collage of words or images called the cadaver exquis. Based on an old parlor game, it was played by several people, each of whom would write a phrase or draw a picture on a sheet of paper, fold the paper to conceal part of it, and pass it on to the next player for their contribution.

This activity uses that same Surrealist format, but with sculpture as a medium. Guests receive a bag full of found objects, tools and a set of rules. Each team must create their piece of the Exquisite Corpse (head, body or torso) unaware of the other sculpting team's plans. Once combined, the resulting art works are truly collaborative.

PowerPoint Karaoke
